Shakespeare Workshop

Shakespeare teases our imaginations in “Much Ado About Nothing.” Masked men disguised at the party. Women at the wedding hide behind masks. For sure, things are not always what they seem!

We decided to make our own masks using paper-mache. Balloons filled with air were covered with paper mache for the full-face masks but half masks were the most popular.

Catalina made a mask with a heart and glued feathers on both sides of the heart. She painted the mask purple, pink, yellow and dark blue, then covered it with colorful sparkles. She explained, “It was fun wearing the mask and it was funny looking through the holes. One eye the paper was covering the hole so I could not see everything. It made me feel like a different kind of person.”

Jessica wanted to make her mask look like a puzzle. She used lots of colors, gold sparkles and a single white feather. She said, “When I was wearing it I felt like I was part of the puzzle. I felt like I was a different kind of thing”

Swim Lessons

Summer is here with a big splash!

The Los Angeles City College swim instructors put our swim skills to the test. But it was not all work and no fun. We also played Frisbee and water ball.

Emil gliding through the water.

Everpeace did not want to put her face in the water at first but that was quickly mastered. Very soon she held her head high as she glided through the water. Christopher jumped from the steps to the swim instructor who stood further and further away. Skye led the way through the water and was beaming at the other end!

Swim boards up front for practice kicking. Next Ashley put on the flippers and propelled through the water. “Wow the frog feet make me go so fast!”

Courtney and Kirsten practiced their strokes. Emil and Hunter flipped around like seals as they did a stroke of freestyle then a stroke of backstroke and then again freestyle. Emil said “It felt weird! Spinning around and around! I’ve never done it before but I want to do it again!”

Hiking

Walking shoes, sunscreen, extra bottles of water and off to Griffith Park for a summer hike! Griffith Park is a wilderness area with wild birds and animals including quail and deer with a "53-mile network of trails, fire roads and bridle paths." One could hike up to Mount Hollywood, just stop, rest and enjoy the spectacular views.

We walked along a stream looking for fish and frogs. The hiking trail snaked across the stream so we counted the bridges as we crossed them. Skye and Christopher skipped along. Ferns, ivy, tall oak trees and so much more kept the fingers pointing and the questions rolling.

After our picnic the younger students were off to the sandbox, slip and slide equipment! We lined our shoes up in a neat row. Ashley tried sliding down head first on the roller slide. What a bumpy ride! Teacher Armik led the game of tossing the ball. Older students enjoyed the age-old game of "Tag!"
